

Advances in Diagnostics

Michael Bernas

This session will review some current technologies in use as well as explore technologies on the near horizon. The focus will be on practical uses of technologies with the understanding of limited resources and opportunities that may not allow widespread utilization. Basic principles will be explored to generate the strengths and weaknesses of various technologies so that participants can develop a good understanding of current diagnostic technologies for assessing multiple forms of lymphedema.